Being a Grandma doesn't mean you're old

By: Reece Whitfield

Often when we think of Grandmas, we think of little old ladies with grey hair who sit around at home and knit. Well, my Grandma is not a bit like this. She never sits around at home. She likes to keep busy.

Reece Whitfield: Grandma, just how old are you?

Jean Goodman: I'm 74 years old. But I don't feel a day over 60.

RW: You look really good for 74, Grandma. How do you do it?

JG: Well, I'm lucky that I can keep active. I love to get out and about as often as I can. I have joined a group called Probus, it's for retired people like myself, and we go on walks all over Sydney. My husband and I also like to travel.

RW: Where have you been to lately?

JG: Last Easter we took our caravan to Canberra for a couple of weeks. We love Canberra in the autumn because it's not too hot and it's not too cold. Before that we went on a fantastic trip to China. It was amazing to see their culture, but I had a lot of trouble with the language.

RW: Is there anywhere you haven't been?

JG: Um... Antarctica! But it's way too cold down there for me. I'd freeze!

RW: Maybe we should leave Antarctica for the penguins. Thanks for talking with me today Grandma. You seem to have lots of fun for someone so old.

JG: Thanks Reece, I'm sure I have lots of fun left in me yet.
