The next two are interpretative or inferential questions, meaning that students need to interpret or infer from the text to find the correct statement. The final question is an applied or evaluative question, so students need to apply or evaluate the information from the text to choose an answer, and there may be no “correct” answer.

What people have made

It is hard to define what makes something a modern wonder. The Christ the Redeemer Statue in Brazil is not the largest in the world, but its setting on top of a mountain is spectacular. Kinkaku-ji is not the most important temple for Japanese Buddhists, but it is covered in pure gold and has an amazing history.

A construction like the North Sea Protection Works is not considered beautiful, but its role in the lives of Dutch people is vital. The Burj Dubai tower in the Middle East is a wonder because of its height — it is almost twice as tall as the next highest building in the world. The Sistine Chapel is a single room, but it holds some of the most beautiful and iconic paintings ever produced.

All these buildings and monuments draw millions of visitors every year to marvel at what other people have made.
